Programs in English

In English, a student can earn a BA with a focus on British and American Literature or in Public and Professional Writing. Minors are also available in English Studies, British and American Literature, Public and Professional Writing, Linguistics, and Creative Writing.

Literature majors learn to demonstrate an attentiveness to textual detail; they are able to explain the relationship between texts and their broader literary, historical, and cultural contexts; literature majors analyze ways in which forms, culture, and identity influence both the production of texts and the critical reception of those texts; as writers, majors arrange and place arguments, using appropriate source material and clear, organized language.

Students are well-positioned for careers that build on these skills—analysis, communication, writing, collaboration—and for graduate school in English, Law, and/or Business.

Public and Professional Writing majors learn to produce clear, effective, well-edited writing to serve the needs of various public and professional audiences; they learn to adapt to working environments that are changing rapidly due to advances in information technology; and they are able to develop a role using their individualized skills and knowledge. Students go on to enjoy successful careers as writers, editors, and document developers. Our graduates work as professional and technical writers, as grant writers, as marketing and public relations specialists, and as teachers, trainers, and consultants.

Students seeking a minor are encouraged to explore. We offer opportunities to write in academic, professional, and creative genres and to study language and its social and cultural functions. Our programs spark the imagination and teach students to read carefully and write purposefully.
